Web-based Resources

<http://www.gospelcom.net/rzim/>

Ravi Zacharias specializes on addressing postmodernity from the perspective of apologetics. Check out the links to find many other web-based resources of this type.

<http://www.spiritgarage.org/>

An intriguing church that actually meets in a converted municipal garage. Mixture of liturgy, social activism, and informality. Worth checking out.

<http://www.freshresource.com/>

An eclectic, international consortium aiming to train young leaders, exchange resources, share ideas, spark creativity in ministry, and develop on-line connectedness, all among Christian communities that are sensitive to the postmodern context.

<http://www.next-wave.org/mar01/churchwebs.htm>

Next Wave is an e-magazine that focuses heavily on the role of technology. Archived issues are available. Many links.

A college student oriented church with a great heart and a great sense of humor.

<http://www.waves.ca/index.htm>

The Waves Church is in Richmond, British Columbia, Canada.

<http://www.bellview.org/bellview.asp>

A newer Baptist church in Springfield, Missouri that emphasizes its "uncommon" qualities. Their theme is "reinventing church for the uncommon generation." They even have a link to Starbucks Coffee.

<http://www.joefellowship.com/>

This site brings a new definition to "eclectic." Focuses on leadership issues and resources. On-line surveys are a prime feature, as are on-line message boards and discussion features. Their motto: "Creativity, Community, Anonymity."

http://www.rockharbor.org/frame_set.htm

Rock Harbor is an in-your-face west coast Gen X church. Their key values are: Belong, Reach, Grow, Serve, Celebrate.

<http://www.transparencynow.com/index.html>

This is a personal site by Ken Sanes featuring many links to content pertaining to postmodernism. The topics range from pop culture to philosophy, and seem to largely represent his own thinking.

<http://www.theooze.com/community/index.cfm>

Another West Coast "edge" church. The site has extensive links and archives, as well as hosting capabilities for on-line discussion.

<http://www.leonardsweet.com/>

Leonard Sweet has produced more insightful research on the relationship of postmodernism to ministry than anyone else has.

<http://hisdefense.org/>

An apologetics site not exclusively focused on postmodernism, but still useful

<http://www.preachingplus.com/whatis.htm>

A site devoted to worship service resources. For $9.95 per month you get access to everything they have. Resources range from sermons, to film clip ideas, to statistics and illustrations.

Dr. Thomas Hohstadt's site largely devoted to his writings and to other resource links. A heavy apologetics emphasis

<http://xenos.org/>

Xenos is an innovative megachurch with a strong emphasis on small groups.

<http://www.zondervanchurchsource.com/CLIP/postmodern.htm>

Loads of links on postmodernism and Gen X from Zondervan.

<http://www.geocities.com/Athens/Pantheon/3675/>

Interesting site aimed at mainline churches (especially Episcopalian) who are wrestling with postmodernity. A good resource clearinghouse via the links. An Episcopal church on this wavelength can be found at

<http://www.churchbeloved.org/>

<http://www.youngleader.org/default1.htm>

Excellent site devoted to Leadership Network's Young Leader Network at Terra Nova project. A must if you're serious.

<http://www.marshall.fm/>

An edgy, artsy, intellectual postmodern church in Seattle. A growing influence. Emphasis on "beauty" as a core value. Connects to the younger creative community in their city.

<http://www.ginghamsburg.org/>

A Methodist church in Ohio that is developing a world-class reputation for the use of technology.

<http://www.smsu-xa.org/>

The Chi Alpha ministry at Southwest Missouri State University. Effectively reaching and discipling postmoderns.

<http://www.christiancounterculture.com/>

An on-line newsletter with sweeping interests in postmodernity, including the application of scriptural principles to environmentalism.

<http://www.santacruzible.org/graceland/>

A church-within-a-church model for reaching postmoderns. Graceland is part of Santa Cruz Bible Church. You can view a service on-line. Their services are Sunday nights at 6 and 8 pm.
