COURSE SYLLABUS

COURSE DESCRIPTION

This course is a study of the essentials of group counseling processes. General group phenomena and current counseling procedures will be discussed. Students will learn about the nature of interpersonal learning, group dynamics, the stages of group development, group interventions, and the selection factors associated with group participation. The course will also study methods of enabling groups to become more creative and growth-facilitating.

OBJECTIVES

Upon completion of the course the student should be able to:

1. Demonstrate the vocabulary necessary to discuss group therapy concepts.
2. Discriminate the concepts and techniques associated with various group therapy approaches.
3. Identify the main therapeutic factors that facilitate therapeutic change in group counseling.
4. Differentiate the behaviors associated with the stages of group development and be able to identify the stage of group development in which a group exists.
5. Identify and explain the therapist's basic tasks and role in the group process.
6. Identify the dynamics underlying the operation of group interaction, including transference and countertransference.
7. Support the choice of one group therapy approach over another for specified treatment disorders.
8. Select appropriate assessment techniques and conduct a pre-group interview with prospective members to determine group participation and compatibility.
9. Identify challenging group members and articulate the ramifications of their interactions and how they affect the group dynamics.

10. Recognize and evaluate his/her characteristic interaction patterns as they occur within a group setting, both as a group leader and a group member.
11. Compose personal thoughts, feelings, dynamics, and evaluations regarding group processes from the perspective of both a group facilitator and a group member.
12. Summarize the ethical and professional guidelines for group leaders—including competence, training, and confidentiality.

TEXTBOOK

Yalom, Irvin D. The Theory and Practice of Group Psychotherapy. 5th ed. New York: Basic Books, 1995.

METHODOLOGY

The Course will consist of didactic lectures, videos, discussion of the assigned text and supplemental readings, small group participation, and class demonstrations that may involve role-playing.

COURSE REQUIREMENTS

1. Completion of all assigned reading. Students are expected to have read the assigned readings prior to class discussion. (You are strongly advised not to fall behind on the reading of the text.)
2. Attendance, punctuality, and meaningful participation in class activities. More than one class absences will reduce one's grade. Three tardies count as one absence.
3. Through out the course student is to attend two different group meetings. One meeting must be an AA meeting. (Check local chapter for times available) The other can be the student's choice. (Ideas: A support group meeting such as a grief recovery group; or check with a local agency which runs a group and ask if you could sit in for educational purposes)
4. Student is to write a two page, double-spaced, personal reflection paper, on each group visits. Reflect and discuss personal feelings and opinions regarding the group—benefits; drawbacks; limitations. What group processes you observed. Qualities of the leader. What you liked. What you think you might do different. How did it feel sitting in the group ect. These reflections are due November 28th, 2006
5. In lieu of research project, student will write a 8-10 page proposal to facilitate a group in a local church or mental health agency. Type of group will be left to the discretion of the student and approved by professor. Proposal will be due November 15th. Grade will be assigned base on the quality of the written proposal. Professor's expectations for the proposal will be given the first day of class.

6. Student will write a 3 page, double-spaced, personal reflection paper. Reflect and discuss personal feelings and opinions regarding group counseling—benefits; drawbacks; limitations; how you personally envision using groups (or not using groups); and any other personal interaction with the course or text. This is a good paper to address the role you envision groups filling in local church ministry. Due on Tuesday, December 5th!!
7. Take two (2) written examinations covering material in the assigned text and lectures. The exams are likely to include both objective and essay questions.

* Professor reserves the right to modify the course requirements and/or grading procedure.

GRADING PROCEDURE

It is expected that all work will be completed as scheduled. Papers are due at the beginning of class: 6:00 PM on the due date. SPECIAL NEEDS

Students with disabilities may request special accommodation and must provide the professor with a copy of verification of the disability from the Student Life Office, by the second week of class in order to receive special accommodations.

CHEATING AND PLAGIARISM POLICY

Academic Integrity: Students are expected to follow guidelines of the American Psychological Association Publication Manual (APA). Any material other than one's that is used in a paper must be cited in order to avoid the plagiarism of another's work. Plagiarism is grounds for a grade of F. The student will be referred to the Dean for further disciplinary action.

CELL PHONE POLICE

Please turn off cell phones before the beginning of class. Leaving class to answer a call disrupts the class and distracts from your classroom participation. Arrangements for your personal communication need to be made before or after class and not during class.
