Fall 2003

COURSE SYLLABUS

COURSE DESCRIPTION:

A course designed to enable the student to conduct meaningful theological research and to report the findings in a clear written format. Exegetical, survey, historical, and descriptive methods will be examined. The form and structure of critiques, research papers, book reviews, journal articles, research proposals, and theses will be studied. Course assignments allow the student to apply the principles and methods learned, receiving constructive evaluation throughout the process.

COURSE OBJECTIVES:

1. To guide the student in learning basic methodology in research.
2. To instruct the student in the mechanics and details of writing a formal research paper in good English style and acceptable form.
3. To acquaint the student with the Library of Congress classification system.
4. To acquaint the student with library research materials and services.
5. To introduce the student to computerized subject searching and other technological advances influencing research methodology.
6. To provide the student with a basic bibliography in the areas of biblical studies and theology.
7. To acquaint the student with biblical, theological, and research terminology.
8. To provide guidelines for the writing of critiques, abstracts, book reviews, journal articles, research papers and theses.
9. To guide the student in the preparation of a research proposal, bibliography, outline, and research paper.
