

ASSEMBLIES OF GOD THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY
BNT 533 STUDIES IN THE PAULINE LETTERS: 2 CORINTHIANS

James D. Hernando, Ph. D.

Fall, 2001

COURSE SYLLABUS

COURSE DESCRIPTION:

An exegetical and doctrinal study of 2 Corinthians, in particular those passages that serve to reveal Paul's understanding of the Gospel, his apostolic calling and ministry, and the criteria for judging true apostleship. Special emphasis will be given to the distinctive theological contribution of this epistle as well as its practical value in addressing and providing guidance for the Pentecostal/Charismatic church today.

COURSE OBJECTIVES:

At the successful completion of this course the student should be able to:

Cognitive:

1. Discuss the cultural, historical background of the city of Corinth and how it is reflected in some of the accusations made by Paul's opponents at Corinth.
2. Outline briefly a historical reconstruction of Paul's visits to Corinth and the various exchanges of letters.
3. Identify and discuss the various critical issues related to this letter and suggest some plausible solutions to the problems raised.
4. Describe the criteria/tests Paul would use to judge an authentic "apostolic" ministry or a "true apostle".
5. Explain the role the Holy Spirit plays in Paul's understanding of the New Covenant Charismatic theology.

Skills:

1. Investigate a particular pragmatic or theological concern in this Pauline letter, define the content and nature of the problem using both the internal evidence of the letter and relevant cultural-historical evidence.
2. Read a New Testament epistle as a literary whole, being aware of the issues and concerns of genre and its impact on interpretation.
3. Read and analyze a NT pericope, by constructing an exegetical outline (in English) which considers both the immediate literary context and its relationship to the NT letter as a whole.
4. Isolate and identify the moral-ethical and theological truths expressed in this Pauline letter and move to a relevant and legitimate application of such in the life of the present-day Church.

Attitudes:

1. Appreciate the historical-cultural nature of all the New Testament writings and how examination of their life-setting serves and aids the task of interpretation.

2. Appreciate more fully the complementary nature of apostolic kerygma and apostolic presence -- i.e., the demonstration of Gospel along with its proclamation.
